Once again, without being too political here, we all notice the current media frenzy about Arizona and since it may come to our doors too, might as well mention it. First, they signed a law which allows all Arizona citizens to carry a concealed handgun without permit. Other states may follow suit and ThePeopleNews.com web site is conducting a poll if we would like to see it in Tennessee or not. No matter what your opinion is, making your voice heard can be important. Also, Arizona allowed their law enforcement officials to ask anyone about their immigration status, which again, generated a lot of emotions nationwide. Many of the media outlets go as far as calling for a national boycott of the whole state of Arizona, and it already started to run its course. The basketball team of a high school in Illinois hard earned a spot in the tournament, winning the conference, first time for the school in 26 years. They have been selling cookies for months to finance the trip. The school administration cancelled the trip because the tournament was in Arizona. They said it's for concerns for the safety of the students. The same school allowed trips to China for their students. They had no safety concerns there and they could align their beliefs with the Chinese government but not with Arizona's. One wonders what kind of message does this send to our students, to all American citizens and to the world globally? American states boycotting another American state to protect illegal immigrants? What is more important for us?

According to statistics, 70% of people in Arizona and 60% of people nationwide supports Arizona's decision. But in the mainstream media for every 12 article opposing Arizona has just one supportive. So if the mainstream media decides we boycott Arizona then we just do so?

Arizona says they brought these laws in reflect of the crime rate. Phoenix is the city with the second highest number of kidnapping cases after Mexico City, assassins walking over the border to kill farmers who dared to report illegal immigrants wandering through their land. Arizona did not create this law, what they did was to enforce an existing federal law that was not enforced by the federal government. Should they be punished for that? What if Arizona is right? Why don't we just trust them with their own matters? What if it comes to our state? Will the rest of the states punish us as well?

Folks, I didn't mean to offend anybody here, these are just questions we might have to answer soon. However you answer, the one thing we can afford less and less is remaining silent. God Bless America
